Driving

Nothing expresses independence more than getting behind the wheel of a vehicle. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration sums it up best: Driving represents freedom, control and competence, allowing us to go where we want and need to go. That’s why losing this privilege, or being asked to give it up, can be one of the most upsetting aspects of aging. Growing older doesn’t mean you become a worse driver nor is there a set age when everyone should give up driving. But successful aging does require assessing and adapting to the physical and mental changes that may occur over time. Use this chapter to help watch for changes that could signal a need to make adjustments in driving.

State of Affairs: Research

Driving conversations must happen and, in many cases, they do.

66% of Adult Children surveyed have discussed solutions for when it might be time for their parents to limit their driving.

81% of Seniors surveyed believe their children/step-children have a shared understanding of solutions to limit driving.

Nearly 80% of adult children feel they have an accurate understanding of their parents’ ability to drive.

Source: Home Instead, Inc., franchisor of the Home Instead Senior Care® network, completed 600 telephone interviews with seniors age 65 and older and 600 interviews with adult children of parents age 65 and older in the U.S.

For the full executive summaries, go to 4070Talk.com.
ACT (Assess, Consider, Talk) to help determine how your future will look. Completing the following exercises could help prepare you for the kind of future you desire.

Assess

It can be difficult to judge your own driving ability as well as that of a parent or another senior. You might need the help of others to be objective. If you think that will be the case, enlist the assistance of a family member or friend.

Has there been a driving situation in the past six months that caused you concern?

__________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________

Explain how you feel about being able to drive. How important is it to you? How would you feel if you had to modify or even give up driving?

__________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________

Identify medical issues that might compromise your driving abilities such as cataracts or hearing loss. (A driver rehabilitation specialist can provide an in-depth evaluation of a person’s driving, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. See the Learn More section for details.)

__________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________
Consider

An individual at any age could be faced with the inability to drive. It’s important to consider a plan in the event that happens.

If you could no longer drive, what would be your plan? How would you get to the places you need and access the services and products you must have?

__________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________

Identify individuals and/or services you think would be willing to help if you were no longer able to drive such as public transit and special senior services.

__________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________________
Talking about driving, whether it’s your own or someone else’s, can be a difficult topic to broach. It’s sometimes easier not to talk about it. Procrastination and avoidance, though, could be deadly.

After assessing and considering, write down your plan for remaining independent and safe on the road. Then share your plan with those who may be affected.

Refer to the following conversation tips and suggestions for help communicating your wishes.

Conversation Tips

40 “Hey, Dad, what happened to the car? Are you OK? You know, your safety is my No. 1 concern.”

“Since the doctor’s office has moved further out, I’m not sure I’m comfortable driving that far. Will you help me figure out how to get there?”

40 “Say, Mom, how about we take a ride around the neighborhood? It’s been a while since we’ve ridden together.”

“I know you’re concerned about my driving, but I’m afraid of losing my friends. Let’s work on a solution together.”
Learn More

The following tools and resources can help families developing an action plan:

- AAA Foundation for Traffic, Safety Self-Rating Tool, Drivers 65 Plus: Check Your Performance, that asks a person to respond to 15 statements about driving situations and gives suggestions based on the person's answers
  seniordriving.aaa.com

- AARP's Driver Safety Program, Are You a Smart Driver, which asks 10 questions about today's driving environment and how you react to driving on today's roads
  aarp.org

- American Occupational Therapy Association’s Older Driver Resource Center; driving specialist
  aota.org or 866.672.9466

- How to Understand and Influence Older Drivers
  nhtsa.gov

- National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, Resources for Older Drivers
  nhtsa.gov

- Driver Improvement Courses from AAA
  seniordriving.aaa.com

- Transportation options for seniors from AAA senioredriving.aaa.com

---

Consider

If you live alone:
The inability to drive could leave you vulnerable. Have a plan in place that identifies individuals who could help you, and public or private services you could call on for assistance.

---

Talk

If you are part of a blended family:
If you are concerned about someone in the family, try to schedule a meeting or conference call to address the issues. If you can’t get consensus, ask a third party professional or member of the clergy to step in and mediate.

---

Assess

If you have dementia:
Talk to your doctor about whether you should still drive and for how long. Or consult a driver rehabilitation specialist. (See contact information in the Learn More section.)